

Wright State University's Campus Pictures

This is one of the cafes that uses a card system, and is also one of the largest cafes on campus. You can access this cafe directly from the underground tunnel connected to most of the campus.

This is an example of the A.T.M. system that is used on campus at Wright State. There are several of these A.T.M systems located all over campus.

This is the upstairs view of the middle of the Student union building where you can see all of the different sororities and fraternities Wright State has.

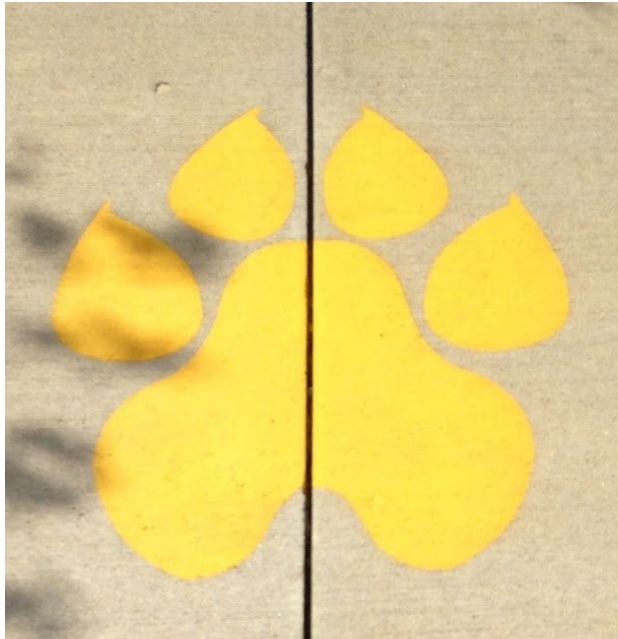

On the inside of a lot of the buildings are pictures of the Wright brothers, the reason for the naming of the university. There are certain areas of this hall way that have really interesting information on them.

This is the side of one of the resident halls, The Woods, which is where most of the first year students end up staying. This building includes rooms for up to six students per room.

This is a side view of the chapel that is on campus for anyone who may like to go and visit. It is a universal chapel, for any religion that you may study.

These claws were located all around campus, and they are mainly there to point you to your destination.

On my way to the woods, we passed a student lying in a hammock and studying.