

My Visit to UC

What did I see/do?

This past Wednesday I took a tour of The University of Cincinnati. When I first got there, we had a meeting about all of the possible majors that are included in the University. Next, I went on a tour of the campus. All of the high school students that attended shadowed a current UC student for the day. I shadowed a student named Caleb who is in many different organizations and is also a resident advisor in a residence hall. We went around the entire campus and I got to see many different class halls, including the engineering hall where I will be studying my major. Also, I got a chance to see various athletic facilities such as the Robert E. Lindner center and the nationally recognized recreational center. Lastly, the center of the campus featured Nippert Stadium, which is home to the UC football team. At anytime when the stadium is not in use, any student has the freedom to go onto the field and use it for recreational use.

What do I think of the school? What did I learn?

UC is by far my first choice in the school I want to attend after high school. The school campus was amazing with so much stuff to do. The academic programs are nationally recognized as one of the best in the country including their engineering program. I learned a lot about the financial aid process for UC. I learned how to apply to the school and how scholarships work at UC. Lastly, I learned about multiple ethnic scholarships I could get for being hispanic and how to apply for those as well.
