

Visit to the UC campus

Schneider Quadrangle and Baldwin Hall. This is where most of the classes for Engineering and Applied sciences are.

This is Nippert Stadium. It was built between 1915 and 1924. It has a capacity of 35,000 people. In 2015 they started a huge renovation that costed about 86 million dollars. This was also done for the 100 year anniversary of the stadium being built.

This is Nippert stadium during a FCC game. They're a minor league soccer team that was recently created and have been gaining a lot of attention.

This is the student rec center. It has a lot of stuff for students to do all while staying on campus. There is a gym that students can use and work out in, as well as a pool where students and alumni can swim and take lessons.

This is the Lindner Center. This is where all of the sport teams meet up. Also they keep a lot of records and photos of past sports teams.

This is Gettler stadium. This is where the UC soccer team plays and trains.

This is the UC University Hospital. UC has a very good medical program and a lot of students choose it for the nursing program they offer.

This is the Crawley building. It is home to the college of medicine which it shares with the medical sciences building, next door.
