

Tools Used By a Band Director

Conductor's baton:

A band director uses a baton to conduct the music a band plays. As the conductor, he/she can queue the band to slow down, speed up, increase in volume, decrease in volume, and many more things.

Director's podium:

The band director stands on the podium so that the band can see him/her while practicing or performing so that they can see if he queues a change in how they play as well as the tempo changes.

Music score:

The band director uses the score so that he/she knows how to instruct how to play the music and knows how the part of every instrument is supposed to sound.