

Daily Life of a Police Officer

Interrogating a suspect

K-9 inspecting for drugs

Officer at the scene of an accident keeping a little girl's attention away from a tragic scene involving her parents.

Ready for anything in riot gear

The main duties of a Police Officer is to protect people and property. They do so by patrolling their city, answering calls and complaints, and conducting accident investigations. When they patrol the city they do so by enforcing parking and traffic laws.

They answer a wide variety of calls and complaints, such as fights, robberies, and even fires, to name a few. Police Officers need to know first-aid and how to interview people and witnesses. These are tasks that they perform when it's their rotation: loading ammunition for the academy and participate in training activities.