

Great Oaks

The first class in Great Oaks was in 1971 and it was held in center office building. This first class was an aide program and Rosemary Kolde was the instructor. Before the campus buildings were built, the students got first, second, and third place victories in state competitions; two others won national essays.

There were to be two campuses, one on the east side and one on the west side, but they ended up not doing this. In 1971, that all changed for the better. They added 13 more schools to it as a whole. They ended up refurbishing these thirteen places and added two new campuses.

In the late 70's, Great Oaks started to teach adults because of the closing of the Ford Transmission Plant in Ohio.

Great Oaks has become a model for career and college preparation. They led in regional collaborative to incorporate 21st century skills in classrooms. All the students have a laptop and all teachers have smart boards.

This will cost me in total of about 6,000 dollars not including gas.
