

Life of a Photographer in the Wild

Documenting people, life, and animals is a hard job to do. Any documentary can take a couple of weeks to several years to complete. The kind of people that would enjoy these kind of jobs would be people that love the outdoors, people, and animals. To become a seasoned documenter you will need years of experience, up to date equipment, a crew to help you, and determination. Skills you will need include the apt to use a camera and, most importantly, a camera.

The tools that Researchers use

#1 Camera- Using a camera will allow you to document the world whether you are taking videos of people, animals, or nature. The only downside is most if not all cameras used in documentation are expensive.

#2 Journal- Documenters will be able to have a physical copy of their data on hand at any time.

#3 Microphone- In order to record the sounds of the world around you, the microphone will be the 3rd most used tool.