

College Tour @ Central State University

This is the National Afro American Museum & Cultural Center which was built and privately funded in 1987.

This is the Admissions Building. All admissions, applying and registering is done and turned in at this building.

This is the Paul Robeson Cultural and Performing Arts Center. This is where all arts classes are taken, which is the bulk of the classes I'll be taking.

This is Wesley Hall. All of the Arts and Science classes are taken here. Some of my classes will be taken here also.

This is the Norman Ward University Center which is scheduled for demolition as they already have a building to replace it.

This is the watchtower that is used for the logo of the university. It's in the heart of the campus.

This is Foundations Hall. It's an honors residence hall on the Eastern side of the campus close to all of the arts buildings.

This is the new Student Union that's replacing the Norman Ward University Center. It includes the café and bookstore.
