This is a sculpture that the students of WSU call “Bart.” It was created to symbolize all the twists and turns that students go through during their college years.

This sculpture is located on a bench on Wright State’s campus in remembrance of the Wright brothers.

This is an image of the front of the Nutter Center where WSU host basketball games, concerts, and other things for their students enjoyment.

This is one of Wright State’s dorms. This particular one being a triple, made for 3 people. It has a bathroom with a shower, 2 desks, a microwave, and a refrigerator.

This is an image of WSU’s weight and exercise room. Students that live on campus have access to this 24 hours a day.

WSU's library actually has a real-life replica of the first plane that the Wright brothers flew hanging inside.

Wright State actually has the Wright Patt Credit Union on campus. Student can set up checkings and savings accounts here with help because these people know how hard it can be to be a college student.

One of the coolest things that I got to see while I visited Wright State was the underground tunnel system that they have for students to use 24 hours a day. It connects to every building on campus so that students and staff can navigate through from building to building without ever going outside. A very great idea for a college in Ohio.
