

Civil Engineering

This is a picture of 2 civil engineers talking about daily duties. Usually, civil engineers start their day by thinking of ways to problem solve. That is the basic idea of a civil engineer: solving problems. To be an engineer you have to be creative and think way outside the box. The 2 men are probably looking at blueprints or looking at an engineering notebook to figure out what their job that day is--it could be fixing wires, it could be implementing a new electronic system, or even just checking to see if everything is ok with the place. You can tell the engineers in this picture are civil engineers because the helmets and where they are; it looks like they are at a power plant fixing something.