

Daily Tasks of an IT Technician

The responsibilities of an IT Technician are dependant upon what happens daily. If working with a business, an IT Technician's typical responsibilities are ensuring that all technology is functioning properly. They will regularly perform maintenance upon the computers of employees, and may also maintain any servers that the company uses. It is also the responsibility of Computer Technicians to make sure that access to internet via either ethernet cable or wirelessly is stable and reliable. A computer technician is responsible for being able to diagnose and fix the multitude of problems that can arise with the use of technology. These can include viruses and hardware issues. An IT Technician is responsible for making sure that all technology in the section in which they are assigned is working properly and smoothly. As a result they have a great amount of knowledge relating to the countless issues which can affect machines.