Wright State: My College of Interest

Wright State University has nearly 18,000 students enrolled and offers more than 230 degree programs. The main campus is in Dayton, Ohio with their branch campus in Celina, Ohio. The University is made up of eight colleges and three schools. The University is named after the Wright Brothers. Wright State used to be a branch of The Ohio State University then became an independent institution in 1967. Wright State has an underground tunnel system that connects all of the buildings except some that house medical majors. The campus is 557 acres in size. Wright State is currently ranked as a tier 2 institution with an application fee of $30 and an acceptance rate of 96 percent. The main reason I want to go to Wright State is the science programs they offer. I've seen the classrooms that I would be in, and I simply love them. I have a friend who completed the chemistry program and he strongly recommended Wright State to me. Wright State is currently my number 1 college of choice.
