

Photographs of Everyday Roofing Tasks

In this picture, roofers are laying metal shingles that are being prepped to be nailed or screwed down.

This employee is constructing what is known as the decking of the roof. This is what the flexi-board or plywood goes on.

This roofer is installing the metal cover that wraps around the chimney to prevent and water leakage. After this he then seals it with caulk to make it water tight.

This final picture is of an employee installing a more complicated roof made of brick and clay. They are much harder to install because they require each individual “sheet” to be installed by hand.
